MONTHLY SUMMARY

The Munro Global Growth Fund returned 6.0% for the month of January, comprising a return of 7.3% from equities and -1.3% from currency. The MSCI AC World Index (AUD) meanwhile returned 2.0% for the month (4.1% from equities and -2.1% from currency).

It was a positive month for global equity markets, albeit with large divergences between the regions, the US S&P 500 was up 5.6%, the Hang Seng added 9.9%, the Japanese TOPIX rose 1.1% and the European STOXX index increased by 1.6%. Key events for the month included a strong US corporate earnings season which led to strong sell-side earnings upgrades, in part to factor in the effect of the Trump tax cuts. This led to c.7% upgrade in earnings at the S&P index level and ultimately a strong move for the market.

Positive performance for the Fund was driven by Netflix which reported strong quarterly results (see page 2); along with long-term core holdings Amazon and Blue Prism. On the negative side, BMW (short position), rose modestly; whilst Samsonite and Broadcom were both weak on limited news flow. On currencies, the USD continues to be weak against most currencies including the AUD, this resulted in a 128bps loss for the Fund from foreign exchange movements. By comparison, the fully unhedged index lost 208 bps from currencies.

MONTHLY OUTLOOK

We remain broadly positive on equities markets, although we expect higher volatility from here as we enter what we think is the later part of the cycle. For the moment, strong economic growth rates provide the backdrop for continued corporate earnings growth. The buoyant environment has been reflected in the December quarter reporting season. Thus far, 180 of the US S&P500 constituents have released results and 79% have beaten on earnings (by a historically high average magnitude of 4.6%), while 75% have beaten sales estimates.

The US equity market has run hard post tax reform in November, and while the speed of the move is a little concerning, the magnitude is currently supported by the earnings environment. Emboldening the bull case is the considerable upside still to come from corporates using their tax savings to increase buybacks, (i.e. shrinking the share count increases EPS), stimulate growth via increased investment spend and embark on transformative M&A.

The risks though we acknowledge are increasing, with unemployment at 4%, are that wage inflation may pick up and force the FED to move quicker on interest rates. While the current US 10-year bond yield of 2.80% is not in itself high, yields have now moved from a low of 2.01% in September and the speed of the move will eventually rattle markets. Higher rates reduce the relative attractiveness of the earnings yields available from equities and will pressure the already 'full' 18x forward PE multiple on the S&P 500.

NETLIX

Netflix was a strong contributor to Fund performance for the month (+70bps) having reported record subscriber growth in 2017.

In what management termed a "beautiful quarter", US streaming subscribers grew to 55 million (2 million net adds in December quarter) and International subs posted a significant beat of 63 million (with the over 6 million added in the quarter). This comes despite Netflix raising prices in October by ~10% on its basic package and ~17% on its premium service, demonstrating the considerable value consumers derive from the platform.

Further evidence is emerging of acceleration in Over The Top (OTT) adoption, as consumers shift off ad supported media. Netflix's deep pockets, which allows it to deliver a strong content slate of originals (such as Stranger Things and The Crown), is giving it a lead that is looking increasingly difficult for peers to surpass. Even Disney and its newly acquired Fox assets, is not likely to release its own direct-to-consumer offering until 2019.

Our investment rationale on Netflix is that its global content competitive advantage continues to grow with scale, building a virtuous cycle of subscriber and content growth that may ultimately see it as the unassailable winner of the OTT providers, leading to it taking sustained share from cable and commercial TV.

FRUTAROM

Israeli ingredients manufacturer Frutarom contributed 25bps to monthly performance as the company continued its strong performance from last year.

Frutarom is the world's 6th largest producer of flavour ingredients to the food and beverage industry and it is one of the largest in fine and natural ingredients, giving it a strong edge over its larger competitors. Continued growth amongst smaller natural food product suppliers plays right into Frutarom's sweet spot with the company active across 150 countries with 71 R&D labs and 55 production facilities.

The company's local production and customization to the specific consumer preferences in the different geographies has seen it strongly outpace its peers in this growing sector. With high single digit organic growth and over 40 acquisitions over the last 10 years Frutarom has grown its sales 4 times, recently upgrading its 2020 targets late last year to 2.25bn Euros in sales by 2020 from just 1.35bn in sales in 2017.
